

ABSTRACT

An apparatus is provided to establish the operating condition of a valve member in a blown film extrusion system. The apparatus includes a controller and it executes program instructions which balance the operating speeds of a supply blower and an exhaust blower of a blown film extrusion system. The controller determines the operating condition of the valve member which places the valve in a linear range of operation.